To Whom It May Concern:

The A. D. Lewis Community Center of the City of Huntington would like to extend their full support to the proposed Junior Master Gardner Program through the West Virginia State University Extension Service and the Huntington Community Gardening Project. The Center feels the proposed project will be a valuable tool in our efforts to offer diversionary programming to low income at risk youth in the Fairfield West community. The A. D. Lewis Community Center will be supportive with this program by promoting and interacting with the instructions about this program to the youth of the community. This program will provide positive instruction to twenty five to thirty youth in this area in a controlled atmosphere. The A. D. Lewis Community Center feels this program would be very beneficial to our youth and our community.

We hope that this project will be funded and we can begin educating our young people in a new and exciting are of activities that they can carry with them through out their lives.
