To Whom It May Concern:

In September 2009, my team and I embarked on a campaign in Huntington, West Virginia to spread the benefits of healthy eating and improving people's food choices. We will be working with two to three schools initially in Huntington and from there we will follow up with a plan to roll out a new programme to all 28 schools in the city and ultimately to the rest of the US. As well as our campaign being documented for a 6-part series on ABC to air nationally early 2010, we are working locally with businesses, charities, families, schools and governmental bodies in order to build the awareness of our project.

In a short amount of time, we were introduced the Huntington Community Gardens (HCG) project and have been in close contact ever since. We share their belief in the need for improved food and garden understanding, better learning and training facilities and an overall passion for improving the community's 'grow your own' culture. By empowering the community with more confidence and accessibility the HCG are helping people to change their lives.

The volunteer staff at HCG have shown commitment, passion and a huge deal of knowledge for what they are doing, and I admire and respect the work that they are doing for the community. We hope to that they will be involved with our project through schools and on a community level and look forward to their support.

My team and I would like to show our support to the people involved with the HCG and WVSU projects; it takes groups of dedicated people like this to build and improve on our communities, a task for which I hope they get all the help they need.

Yours sincerely
